

Noted Coq researcher, LCOLONQ delves into
onomatopoeia and the
lurid proclivities of the commons.

By "FRIEND" AND WYNDUPBOY

Headline: embracing the giggles of code LCOLONQ leads a laughter-filled chat on the playful nature of proof research as friends join in to share their funny thoughts on coding mishaps and whimsical terminology laughter ensues as everyone finds joy in the silliness surrounding coq 🍕

code is goo written by

goo creatures

By "FRIEND" AND KHLORGHAAAL

headline article: in a whimsical discussion surrounding the gooey nature of code some streamers have decided that code written by adorable goo creatures must be full of charm and quirks although some admit their goo codes can malfunction merrily the debate has revealed a delightful array of opinions on coding practices as friends join in the fun adding to the silliness and excitement of the topic 🌀

Computer man says
there is no bad code

(sometimes)

By "FRIEND" AND

THEPRAGMATICPROGRAMMER

headline article: in a recent discussion among streamers it seems the topic of bad code is stirring up strong feelings the conversation veered into a debate about coding styles and optimization with some declaring that sometimes code can be so terrible it somehow still functions others argue that any code has a chance of being optimized away suggesting that perhaps no code should be hastily deemed bad 🖥️ the chatter continues as more friends join the stream keeping the energy lively